“David is a painter who builds his work based on geometry and the color system and symbolism. The three pillars of his work are technical skills, intellectual content and heart. He chose the color pink as a striking trademark and signifier of his own aesthetic and artistic concept. He always looks for the human path, the complexity of nature and insightful insight into matters, and is faithful to philosophical values. The artist David sees himself as is not only a creator of works of art, but also a prophet who creates beauty. Following figures such as Péladan, James Lee Byars and Joseph Beuys, it is the artist who is perceived as a shaman mediating between the higher world and the here and now.”
